MELANOMA IN THE MOUNTAINS

A Practical Course In Dermatopathology

Thursday, February 18, 2010
Sunday, February 21, 2010
The Steamboat Grand
Steamboat Springs, Colorado

Overview and Objectives

Melanoma in the Mountains is a comprehensive practical dermatopathology course designed for pathologists, dermatopathologists and dermatologists who have an interest in improving their histologic diagnosis of melanocytic lesions.

In addition to lectures that intensely cover both benign and malignant melanocytic lesions in detail, the course has 25 high quality microscopes with glass slides at each microscope. These high quality teaching slides are changed daily. Each slide has a detailed discussion on that case.

The emphasis of this course, in addition to providing a comprehensive background on melanocytic lesions, is a practical approach to the correct diagnosis of melanocytic lesions, and preparation of pathology report for these lesions.

Educational Objective

- Compare the differences between benign, atypical and malignant melanocytic lesions
- Demonstrate the ability to utilize histochemistry and immunoperoxidase studies to differentiate between benign and malignant melanocytic lesions
- Construct a clinically helpful pathology report on atypical and malignant melanocytic lesions
- Describe the medicolegal obligations and implications of pathology reports in regards to melanocytic lesions
